Time. It's entirely immutable and inescapable, permeating into almost every aspect of day-to-day life. There are days we wish it would move faster and days we would give anything to hold on to it for a little bit longer. In the end, though, we still have absolutely no control over how fast or slow time moves. It's been the same forever.

What we can control, however, is who we choose to be at this point in time. We have each arrived at Taylor with a purpose and it's up to us to discover and fulfill what God has called us to do. And yes, of course, this takes time.

It also takes people. The classmates, wingmates, faculty, and staff members that surround us every day pour a great amount of time into encouraging and ensuring our growth as young Christian men and women. And that's why this is a very special time in our lives.

During these few short years at Taylor, we will encounter times to connect, to discover, to play, to act, and to grow. And we will gain as much as we're willing to receive. This book captures those times.

As we transition into the future, we are given the opportunity to become the people we are meant to be. This is that time.

We have come to Taylor University for such a time as this.

welcome weekend

Sixty-five O-leaders and the larger Taylor community helped welcome approximately 450 freshmen and nearly 50 transfer students to Taylor this fall. The students participated in a variety of activities and events, including the long-standing Taylor hoe-down, designed to help them assimilate to the Taylor community. Following Welcome Weekend, the new students take a one-credit hour course, New Student Orientation, to further assist their transition to Taylor and to college life.

During the weekend, freshmen spend the 72 hours in small groups. "For our last discussion group we went to Ivanhoe's. When we got back to campus we were just talking in front of Sammy before we parted ways with a couple of guys that lived there. Before leaving, a girl in our group asked if we could pray together before we ended O-group officially. So we prayed in a circle right outside Sammy in front of the steps. Everyone prayed, and it was pretty sweet," recounted sophomore O-group leader Dave Voss.

Brian Robinson, another sophomore O-group leader joked, "I think these two people that were in my O-group are dating now. If that's not yearbook worthy, then I don't know what is."

lasting impressions

"The hoe-down is such a great ice-breaker for the freshmen. It's even better coming back as a sophomore and avoiding the awkward 'You seem cool. Want to go square dance?'"
- Laura Bobbitt '10

"The hoe-down is crazy! Everyone has pent up LTC energy and this is their annual chance to GET DOWN."

-Alex Esclamado '09

"The culmination of four years of hoe-downs resulted in the caller using my partner (Jorge Burmicky) and me as the example couple. Truly, a dream come true."

community plunge

Community Plunge commenced this year with more than 700 students, faculty and staff from all over campus. After making their way to Rediger Chapel, they dispersed throughout Upland and the surrounding communities to take a part in this year's ministry of volunteering in the community.

The jobs available included gardening, painting, trash pick-up, washing windows and entertaining the elderly. Despite the gloomy weather, volunteers still found joy in the tasks they were completing.

Community Plunge is sponsored and put on by Community Outreach, one of the nine divisions of Taylor World Outreach. The committee also organizes the annual Christmas Drive, where students have the opportunity to purchase gifts for children in the community. It's an event that the community looks forward to every year. It's a great way for Taylor students, faculty and staff to reach beyond campus and initiate change in the local community.

Seventeen acts tried out in front of the ICC panel on Monday night, October 1 and Tuesday night, October 2. On the second night of try-outs, the panel stayed for two and a half hours trying to determine which acts would make Airband. ICC began by selecting the top three acts that immediately made it and the worst three that would definitely not make it. They then voted on the remaining acts and relied on a process of elimination from there.

Ten acts initially made the cut and e-mails were sent to each group leader immediately following the meeting, letting the groups know whether they had made it into the show. In regard to the selection process, ICC member Laura Bobbett said, "It was handled in a very mature way and we respected each other; however, it was tense because there were very strong differing opinions. In the end most of us felt like the right decisions were made."

With an array of great acts, and a lot of them being from popular musicals, the judges had a very difficult time choosing the top three. In the end, the winners included Gerig Hall's rendition of "Tradition" from Fiddler on the Roof, 2nd East Wengatz's energetic performance of Grease's "Greased Lightning," and 2nd West Olson's "One Short Day" from the musical Wicked.

family weekend & grandparents day

Parents and Family Weekend, held September 21-23, 2007, was a huge success. God blessed us with beautiful weather and over 800 total parents and family members in attendance. This year, two new events were added and proved to be a lot of fun for everyone - the Friday evening Block Party and the Saturday afternoon tailgate party. We also had enlightening Chapel and Worship services, Harvest Buffet, a successful General Store, visits with faculty, a winning football game, and an entertaining concert featuring Tim Zimmerman and the King's Brass.

Grandparents Day served as the kick off to Heritage Weekend. A warm welcome was given by President and Mrs. Habecker. Moving testimonies were given by seniors Trevor Kight, Chrissie Thompson and Mark Heydlauff. Juniors Matthew Hurst and Emily Winter, accompanied by senior Emily Schmeichel, shared their musical talents to the delight of the audience. Grandparents were blessed by the Taylor Chorale as they sang "Holy, Holy, Holy" in chapel and were challenged by Derek Duncan Jr., pastor of the E. 91st Street Christian Church of Indianapolis, Indiana. Classes, lunch, campus tours and a presentation by Dr. Don Takehara regarding science at Taylor filled the afternoon. A concluding concert by the Taylor Wind and Jazz ensembles was enjoyed by the special guests attending Grandparents Day.

Home is the place where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in.
-Robert Frost

Home. A place where you can be yourself. A place where you can grow. A place where you can always return. For so many of us, Taylor University becomes a home. A place where we live, work, laugh, and transform from teenagers to adults. Sadly, so many of us lose sight of what home is as we walk, run, stumble and crawl down the narrow road. We get lost in our daily routines and often forget why home was so great in the first place. But we always desire, somewhere in our souls, to reconnect.

And that is just what students and alumni had the opportunity to do during this year's homecoming weekend. Beginning with Dr. Jay Kesler's message in chapel and continuing through Sunday morning devotions, old friends were welcomed home by the Taylor University community. We saw faces of people who graduated just last year as well as had the opportunity to meet members of the class of 1957, who celebrated their 50th class reunion this fall.

Our planning began months before members of our Taylor family rejoined us on campus and our student cabinet was hard at work behind the scenes of every event. They smiled all weekend, even on Saturday at 6:30 a.m. while they set up for the annual homecoming 5K. Throughout the day, we helped alumni reconnect with their friends by participating in several events, from the alumni volleyball scrimmage to the first "Fun 'n Games" night at the KSAC. What a joy it was to serve members of our extended family as they returned home.

And so we hope that every homecoming weekend offers the same to our alumni, and eventually to you, fellow Taylor students. May we always have this place to reconnect. May we always be able to return home.

We all have those ideas. Those ideas when we look to a friend and say "Wouldn't it be cool if...." The Reject Show was one of those ideas. As a Youth Conference Cabinet, we were brainstorming how we could fundraise for kids who couldn't afford to come to YC. Then it hit us. Why don't we take the talent that never got into My Generation Night or Nostalgia Night and give them one last shot to show their stuff? We quickly spread news to an eager student body who was intrigued about the acts that might try out. I mean, who wants to be called a reject anyway? Would it be blatantly obvious they got cut from My Generation Night and Nostalgia Night?

With approximately 500 people in attendance, we raised right around $1000 for Youth Conference. We saw everything from "Random Brad" rapping to a comedy routine to Josh Porter as Enrique Iglesias. But what made this show special was the feeling we all got from it. Seeing everyone using their God-given talents for His glory was something really cool to see. Heck, we also felt pretty cool about starting the next Taylor tradition. So one last time, thank you "rejects." We couldn't have done it without you.

W.O.W.

WOW, an annual mission-focused week designed to increase Taylor students' involvement in global missions, was themed "Here Am I," taken from Isaiah 58:8-9. Miss Kimberly Smith spoke powerfully about living in the in-between times with her message titled "Freedom Starts with Me." Pastor Chet Lowe used humor and his personal experiences to challenge students to add to their faith, assuring them that God is ready to use them now. Dr. K. P. Yohanan spoke in the final WOW chapel, and encouraged the Taylor student body to live out what he called the "Radical Life."

spiritual renewal

Taylor's emphasis on personal spiritual growth, and our role as believers to share Christ's love becomes apparent during Spiritual Renewal and World Opportunity Week. Pastor Alistair Begg, the Fall Spiritual Renewal speaker, challenged students with his series from Psalm 32 entitled "The Joy of Forgiveness." He reminded students that revival and forgiveness begins with our knees bent and our faces to the ground. Dr. Erik Thoennes, spoke to the student body during the Spring Spiritual Renewal Week, focusing on "Pursuing a Passion for Christ." He challenged students to know, proclaim, and suffer like Christ."

my generation night

Green slime, glow bracelets and great music made this year's My Generation Night (MGN) an awesome show. The concert's success was largely due to the theme: Nickelodeon University. When a member of SAC mentioned Nickelodeon as a possibility for the theme in one of our meetings, it immediately seemed to click. A lot of us had grown up watching shows on "Nick," and we knew it would resonate with the student body. This connection with Nick proved true, because for the first time in MGN history we had a sold-out show.

This year we also had our largest turnout for tryouts with 40 bands and only 11 spots available during the show. I think the crowd really enjoyed the show because this year SAC decided to have a diversified line-up that included different music genres. I loved looking at my peers' faces out in the audience as they took in everything we had worked so hard to produce. I was so incredibly proud of the musicians as well as my cabinet for all the hard work they put in over the months leading up to the show. It was great to have my last MGN be such a great success.

It's one of the most highly anticipated nights of the entire school year. The evening begins with the Silent Night basketball game where students, dressed up in their favorite pajamas, cram into Odle gymnasium and sit quietly until our team scores its 10th point. Instantly, the entire crowd, with the exception of the confused visiting team, explodes with cheering fans.

After Silent Night, the mass of students gather in the Dining Commons where Holipalooza is held by the Interclass Council (ICC). Various events occur year after year, including the gingerbread house competition, build-your-own-cookie bar, pictures with Santa, and Karaoke. The night is brought to a close with Dr. Habecker reading of the Christmas story and the poem "Twas the Night Before Finals."

“ Basically, Silent Night is the best sporting event ever. Period. No questions asked. My favorite part is that every year our wing, Third East Wengatz, writes “Taylor University Trojans” on our chests. Then when the basketball team scores their tenth point, we rip off our shirts and stand along the baseline the entire time cheering.

Lighthouse is a short-term mission program that allows students to spend their interterm during the month of January engaging in service projects, compassionate ministries, community development, teaching English, performing arts, evangelism, and discipleship. This year, under the direction of faculty sponsors and hosts, teams of students traveled to a variety of countries around the world, including Czech Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, India, and Paraguay.

This year's Indiana Jones themed Nostalgia Night is one that will go down in history. We SAC members were overwhelmed with 42 bands lining up to try out for the show and only 12 bands could be chosen.

From Jeremy Davis' signature Pete Townsend pinwheel guitar moves to Josh Porter and Andrew Dawdy's Simon & Garfunkel harmonies, the show was a hit.

The Indiana Jones theme created an ear piercing uproar in the audience during the skits and commercials performed. The continual Taylor-themed jokes throughout Indiana's quest to find "Bishop William Taylor's Treasure" were absolutely hysterical. Surprises were around every corner, especially as Indiana repelled from the chapel ceiling and finally found the treasure to be Jordan Leick- the singer of the last song.

Throughout my three years on the SAC cabinet, I have truly never seen such an amazing show at Taylor. The skits and performances were flawless. I will never forget the moment everybody in the audience stood up and sang "Hey Jude" as the show came to a perfect close.

The seventh annual Trojan Film Festival was the week of April 10-13. The film festival is an opportunity for Taylor students with an interest in film to submit their work to be previewed by the campus and a judging panel.

Students, faculty, and parents viewed the films Tuesday through Thursday. Between the films, the directors and producers took time to talk about their projects and fielded questions from the audience.

On Friday, April 13, the formal Trojan Film Festival Awards Ceremony began promptly at 8:30 p.m. in Rediger Auditorium, complete with a red carpet and well-dressed individuals. The ceremony presented cash prizes to the winners in categories such as Best Actor, Best Screenplay, and Best Picture. After awards were announced, the large crowd watched the winning films.

youth conference

This is the 74th consecutive year that Youth Conference has been in operation. During that time, there have been numerous themes, speakers, bands, co-directors, and student volunteers. Hundreds of kids have come to Taylor to enjoy living in community with college students. They expect to find God here, to feel Him, experience Him, and see Him in a way they never have before. And every year, God shows up. He works in ways that we would never expect, providing results beyond our wildest imagination. It doesn't matter how well-prepared we are, what we are expecting, or even what we have seen God do in the past - God is faithful. This year, with the theme of "KNOW," we focused more on the personal aspect of our faith. Too often, we put ourselves in a group of Christians and as a result, we feel safe and seem to have the faith thing down. But what happens when someone asks you about a particular Bible story or where you stand on things? You have always appeared that you KNOW, but do you really KNOW? Do you KNOW what its like to be in a relationship with God, to have a depth of faith that enriches your life? So how do we sum it all up? 1 Corinthians 8:2 does a good job: "The man who thinks he knows something does not yet know as he ought to know. But the man who loves God is known by God." Eventually, we will reach a point where we have a personal relationship with God and do KNOW. That's where we want to be. That is what KNOW means to us.

Students fell on their faces in brokenness, crying and praying and worshipping the Lord on their knees. To see the Spirit move like that rocked me to my core.

For over 50 years, Taylor's students, faculty, families, and community have enjoyed Taylathon. Changes for participants this year included 5:45 a.m. practices every other week as well as restoring the tradition of team entries. Crashes, of course, were inevitable, including junior Ellen Koch's flip over another team's wipeout and freshman David Miller flying into the tree by Nussbaum. The junior womens' team was comprised the Wednesday before the race, and the freshmen mens' team boasted several intense injuries, which led to line-up changes up to the night before. Weather reports showed rain showers for April 26, but with the exception of colder temperatures in the early morning, the weather was perfect. The senior girls, after having arrived in Dr. Heth's yellow VW Bug, secured a victory for the second year in a row, followed by the freshmen, the sophomores and the juniors. First place for the mens' teams again went to the seniors, whose entry involved a police car and flowers for their female classmates. The freshmen team finished second with the juniors and sophomores in third and fourth places.

"Every morning when I would wake up at 5:30 for practice, I would regret my decision to ride, but the day of the race made all the injuries and lack of sleep worth it."

Kyle Faust '08

"I've found Taylathon is only in small part about the race, winning or sweet wrecks. It is far more about the camaraderie amongst classmates that develops from the pursuit of a common goal at 5:45am."

Someone asked me the recently why I enjoyed spending so much time in the theatre. I responded, "Well, it's kind of become home to me." "How so?" they asked. I paused a moment. I wasn't sure how to respond. There's something almost "other worldly" that happens inside the theatre quadrant. (No, I'm not just making some clever pun about the fact that this year our audiences got to witness "Middle Earth" come to life, although that was quite an adventure.) I don't know why, but the theatre has a way of bringing the most wonderfully unique people together in the strangest of ways. Yes, we all have our individual quirks and oddities, but we all share an indescribable passion for the work we are doing together on and off the stage. Its not easy spending late hours carving gigantic foam puppets, sewing multitudes of 1920s flapper dresses, building functioning elevators and round doors, creating 1960s appropriate soda cans, hanging lights, learning tap dances, or rehearsing lines - but for some crazy reason, its all worth it.

Actually, its not crazy, and I know the reason. Its worth it because of how it changes us. It's worth it because we are using and refining the gifts God has given us. Its worth it because it strengthens our community and builds life-long friendships. Its worth it because it helps us tell stories and challenge others with difficult questions. Its worth it because in our weakness, God is strong, and each show that we put on is a testimony to his strength. I love this family. I love this home. If you get the chance, I encourage you to come and see why.

Graduation was a very surreal experience. I don't think the weight of it actually hit me until I stood up with my fellow psychology majors and made the long walk across the aisle and up to the platform. As I stood waiting in line, I realized all that had happened over the last four years. Dozens of tests completed, hundreds of pages in papers written, millions of words in textbooks read. But there were also close friendships, lasting relationships and a great community that evolved for me over the course of my college education.

I've already forgotten the memorized note cards and what papers were for each class, but I will never forget the friends, professors, and impacting moments that made my Taylor experience so special.

I think that graduation was for me an incredible culmination of all of these factors. I probably won't remember all the words spoken and who received what honors, but the faces and experiences are forever engrained in my memory.

As I waved goodbye to close friends and gave my roommate a lasting embrace, I realized that my life at Taylor is over. The tears shed were a tangible reminder of that. But I will look back fondly and remember that even though my time here was one of the most trying, stretching and incredibly busy moments in my life, it was also one of my favorites. It was here that I made my dearest friends, received enlightening instruction from a well-balanced faculty and came to know what life as a part of a Christian community really was.

So, as I walked off that platform with diploma, towel and Bible in hand, I felt sad to leave my current college life behind. But I also felt an overwhelming sense of peace about the journey ahead. That's what Taylor provided for me – a unique experience that both instructs and embraces becoming the person God wants you to be.

When walking through Modelle Metcalf Visual Arts Center, we realize that Taylor is blessed with a fantastic art building. It's easy to take it for granted because most people on campus don't remember life without it (me included), but for a university of our size it is almost unheard of to have such a beautiful, spacious facility. More importantly, our faculty is top notch. It's inspiring to be working late into the night on a project (usually due the next day) and have my professor right there with me working to meet his own deadline. It's also kind of scary thinking that the lack of sleep will follow me past college. Taylor's commitment to the art program is clearly evident in the senior art shows. The work displayed in the senior exhibitions is of a very high caliber and so much credit for that goes back to the faculty. I'm so grateful for professors who care about their students in and out of the classroom, or in this case, the studio.

One of the most memorable moments for me this year, as an accounting major, was Accounting Interview Day in September. The day consisted of interviews with accounting firms and government agencies for accounting majors from a number of small private colleges throughout Indiana. I came later in the day as I had interviews scheduled for that afternoon. When I arrived, most of the other Taylor students were already there. The holding room for candidates had chairs set up in rows like a classroom. However, while all the other students from the other schools were sitting in the chairs, the Taylor students had formed a circle to talk to each other. It reminded me of what a privilege it is to be a Taylor student and the awesome community that we have here. Even our accounting majors like to group up in a conversation circle.

-Zach Whitesel '08

Accounting is something that I didn't come into Taylor expecting to go into, but as I move forward in my studies, more doors are being opened than I expected. I have been introduced to new ways to serve in missions and community development work in the areas of finance and accounting and it has been wonderful to see the ways in which God can use my major and my interest in missions and development work.

I would just like to comment on the Christian Education major in general. CE is great. It doesn't matter what kind of day you are having, whenever you get in a class with your fellow CE majors, your day changes for the better. Every class period I walk in, it seems like a "reunion" and it's like I haven't seen my classmates for years, when in reality it's been only a few hours. There is such an excitement and energy created in those environments and you can't help but smile.

I love that every morning I walk in to class and everyone is in a conversation with someone. When you put a bunch of students together that simply love people, it is a guaranteed good time. I also have loved all of the retreats. Regardless of how smoothly they went, there are always some good times to be had with the late night food runs and fellowship with people that have a passion for seeing the church and other ministries effectively reach out to those around us.

-Ashleigh Greenwell '09

Acts and the Early Church really challenged me to look deeper into the Bible to see what God calls me to look like when doing missions and when being a representative of Christ. Not only do these books help us to focus on mission strategy, but we also see the emphasis on doing missions in spirit and in truth.

I think one of the top stories for this year is the initiation of the "Green" Science Building project. This is exciting for a few reasons. First, the old building is inadequate for the current needs of faculty and students. A new building would provide ample learning space and increased technology. Second, a significant portion of the design is being completed by faculty and students. The design of the building is being treated like a giant student engineering project. With the guidance of faculty, students are able to contribute to many aspects of the design, from thermal modeling to the mechanical structure.

Because the "green" component is the driving force behind this project, innovation is needed in every facet of the design. This allows Taylor students to dig their hands into a field that is very cutting edge. Environmental concern is increasing in importance in nearly every aspect of our society. Environmental friendly products are no longer limited to simply tuna fish and recycled paper. Emissions standards are becoming more stringent and businesses are marketing products as "green" in response to the awareness hype that has begun to build. All this to say, environmental consideration will become increasingly important in our generation where it was clearly absent in that of our parents. As scientist and engineers it will be absolutely necessary that our work be environmentally conscience. Taylor's "green" building is a commitment to this charge. Giving students the opportunity to participate will help them to experience design with an environmental intent, something that will certainly be a part of their work, whatever field they chose to enter.

This has been one crazy year as I'm taking a full load of science classes in addition to preparing to take the MCATs in April. However, throughout it all, I am so thankful for the ability I have to work with the amazing faculty in the science departments, and for the way the students all support each other. The studying may be hard, but the fun interactions with professors, the little victories, and the other students make it all worth it. From the joking with Dr. Whipple when I'm in the lab late at night, to the tea and M&Ms in Dr. Moore's and Dr. Regier's office, to the excitement of doing well on a practice MCAT, to the science puns and jokes of Dr. Kroll and to the calamari and crayfish in Dr. Reber's lab. I've really appreciated being part of the science department at Taylor. As the facebook groups says "TU Bionerds for life!"

political science history

When my cabdriver, Stephen, told me he was originally from Ghana, I was really disappointed. It had been my goal during the trip to Washington, D.C., to engage the people I met there in conversation. But Ghana – of all the current events in Africa with which I am at least roughly familiar, those occurring in Ghana – near the bottom. I had nothing to say to this man.

But wait! What was I thinking? I had just taken the World Since 1945 with Dr. Tom Jones, and we had spent an entire day talking about mid-twentieth century Ghana and its famous leader, Kwame Nkrumah. And that was the ticket. All I did was mention Nkrumah's name to Stephen, and the floodgates opened. Stephen talked about Ghana for the entire 20 minutes I was in the cab.

This is exactly why I love history and the things I have been privileged to learn in the history department at Taylor – learning about a people group's past helps you engage them in the present.

-Philip Byers '08

One thing that I love about the political science department is the overall open-mindedness and respect that students bring into classroom discussions. Over the past few years my opinions on divisive political issues have been shaped largely through interacting with my fellow political science majors who bring a great deal of insight to a variety of views and positions. Plus, no one can resist the devastatingly charming Steven P. Hoffmann and R. Philip Loy.

Three-hour night classes are normally miserable but our TV production lab was definitely an exception. The 10 communication students in the class, along with Professor John Bruner, really bonded over the semester as we stressed and collaborated to produce live television. We even started a tradition of wearing Hawaiian shirts for "Maui Monday." It still is one of my favorite classes for my entire time at Taylor.

It's obvious that communication is inescapable. We all have to participate in it and eventually become defined by it. The exciting thing about being a communications major is it enables you to take a life skill and become a professional in it. It is crucial to be an effective communicator in a fast-paced culture. This department equips students with knowledge that will allow them to obtain a career that is suiting to their passions. Personally, I am a communications major because my passion is interacting with people on a relational level. Further developing those skills is helping me enrich what I love.

From analyzing communication in the family to developing writing and speech skills there is an array of opportunity to be successful once we step foot outside of Taylor. New to the department this year is I.A.B.C (International Association of Business and Communicators) student chapter. This club allows students to network with professionals in various fields to develop connections and gain awareness of potential career opportunities. We frequently have people from multitudes of professions speak with our chapter. Being actively involved has allowed me to understand what is expected from potential employers and how that can be obtained.

The professors in this department are dedicated to their students and their success. It has been monumental to have professors who are willing to invest in my life. They make learning stimulating and are constantly seeking to improve the department. I am appreciative of the communications department and privileged to be a part of it.

This year we have had a good year. Even with all the work we have to do for classes (it is quite a bit), we still find time to have fun as a group. We had our math cookout, a bonfire, and a Christmas party in the fall. In the spring we had Ragtime featuring Dr. Delong, EACS, Pi Day, the Euchre Tournament, and the Spring Banquet. My favorite memory came from the EACS program. Thirty Taylor students went to New Haven in February and we got to play with fifth graders. I know that the Taylor students all had fun and I could tell that the fifth graders had a blast as well. I heard that one fifth grader exclaimed "I knew this day was going to be fun but I didn't know it would be this fun. This day is amazing!" Along with these events we got to learn from a new professor (Dr. Mummert) and some of us got free graphing calculators at the TI Conference that was held here in the fall. The activities almost make up for all the tears shed over late nights of homework.

The Dead Mathematician's Society, more commonly known as the DMS, was initially born out of the grief and sorrow over College Geometry in the Spring of 2007. At the same time Abstract Algebra was also underway and contributed greatly to the growth and development of this newfound organization. From daily three hour meetings in the conference room on 2nd Nuss to endless office hours and multiple boxes of Kleenex, the legend has carried over to the present, and reminded many of their past or present experiences in Linear Algebra and Mathematical Statistics. And now the legend lives on in the hearts of those in Advanced Calculus under the guidance of Dr. Mummert (and Ross).

Being a part of the Education Department of Taylor is like being a part of a big family. The professors are caring and they desire you to succeed. Some of my favorite moments include breakfast at Dr. Quinn's, frosting Christmas cookies at Dr. Tyner's house, and study groups with friends. There are many opportunities for professional advancement with practicums, tutoring, and TEMP experiences. Networking is also encouraged with honor societies such as Kappa Delta Pi. Overall, the Education Department gives you a leg up as you prepare for your career in Education.

I student taught during the fall semester in Marion for a 3rd grade class, and in Gas City for a kindergarten class. Student teaching developed a passion in me for teaching and working with kids. I like teaching, yet what gives me the greatest joy is getting to know the personal lives of my students. I want to know what excites them, what angers them, and how they view themselves and the world. Spending time with children also inspires me to be more childlike in several ways. Children have an abundance of joy. They walk in freedom. They don't know how to carry offense, so they quickly forgive. Play time is a must. Children are continually awed and amazed by God's creation and the people around them. I laugh often as I watch them. As you spend time with children in the future, consider their ways, and mature into childlikeness.

I entered Taylor with a strong affinity towards math and science. Studying language was one of the remotest ideas on my mind. Nevertheless, undergrad was a new chapter with new possibilities. Listening to the advice of my PA, I went to Spain and my life was forever changed. Though I struggled to communicate via Spanish, I never once doubted the importance nor the beauty of accessing another language. Since then, many doors have been opened for me and the TU Modern Language Department has had an integral role in loosening the hinges. I have fallen in love with communication, with professors, and with people and their languages.

As one could probably guess, there aren't very many French majors on this campus, and I submit that there are many advantages to being part of this minority. One, there's the shock and awe response of those who ask what your major is; it is rather exotic. Two, we're like a family. I mean, how could you not be when you get stuck in the same closet of a classroom with the same people for four years? And three, getting a '10-fingered Wool!' from Dr. West...what more can be said?

-Charity Smith '09

Studying abroad is a part of the college experience I would recommend to anyone. The Spain program was an incredible semester for me in multiple ways. I was really challenged mentally, spiritually, and emotionally. I learned so much from the culture and from my professors, and I was able to travel to many places where I would never have gone otherwise.

psychology social work sociology

In March 2008, I had the opportunity to attend the International Counseling Psychology Conference in Chicago. It was a great experience to see and interact with all of the research that is going on in psychology today. Taylor students Sarah Stebbe, Travis Booth, and Jenny Gallagher gave their own presentation in one of the poster sessions as members of Taylor professor Scott Moeschberger's research team. Their poster focused on "Reconciliation and Emotional Healing Among Ex-combatants in Northern Ireland" and they did a fabulous job. The four of us, along with senior psychology major Jena Frey, were privileged to gain experience and knowledge in the field of counseling psychology at a level that is rarely available for undergraduates.

I love my major. Before coming to Taylor, I never thought I would be graduating with a B.S. in Exercise Science. I was thinking more along the lines of Art Education - God obviously had other plans and I am so thankful. In Physiology of Exercise, we learn so many things that we can apply in our personal training sessions in the Fit Into Health Program. Fit into Health is a program for Exercise Science majors to apply what we are learning in class by personally training faculty, staff and community members. Fit Into Health is usually the highlight of my Tuesdays and Thursdays because I have so many great clients. I love working with them and sharing my knowledge of nutrition and exercise to help them work towards a healthier lifestyle - it's so rewarding to see my clients feeling more comfortable in the gym after just a few sessions.

I also really appreciate my Organization and Administration of Physical Education class with Dr. Taylor. He does a really good job of not only teaching us what is in the book, but uses experiences called "initiatives" to help us understand the information better. We have done trust walks and all sorts of things having to work together as a group to execute what Dr. Taylor has asked us to do. It always relates to class and it helps us think outside of the box at the same time.

Exercise science students are a compelling mix of nerdy and awesome. We are the ones who like to use words like "norepinephrine" and "sarcolemma" while we run on the treadmills and play on the Bosu balls. We think it's cool to wear sweatpants and argue about the effectiveness (or lack thereof) of protein shakes. Any of us will tell you that Erik Hayes is the coolest man on campus and that the DC should serve more whole grains. We are terribly misunderstood, we do NOT want to teach PE and we don't know what we are going to do with our major. . .but we love it. And we'll come in real handy the next time you try to calculate your BMI or drop a few pounds.

The Writing Center is a great place to hang out, work on your writing, and develop confidence as a writer. If you come back often enough, you might find yourself developing some inside jokes with our consultants as well. From freshmen to graduate students, from a preliminary topic to a twenty-five-page final draft, the Writing Center is for anyone at any skill level and at any phase of the writing process. The wide variety of students, assignments, and topics we get to work with on a daily basis makes the Writing Center a consistently interesting place to be. The learning process at the Writing Center is definitely a two-way street; often we learn just as much as the students we work with. We're not perfect writers, just people who want to share a God-given gift with fellow students and friends. Working with Dr. Barb Bird, the rest of the Writing Center staff and all the amazing students who come in has been a highlight of my Taylor career, and I know my fellow consultants feel the same way. This has been a great year and we look forward to more great sessions and more great times next year.

Walking back onto campus near the end of August for the fifth year in a row was strange. I often thought, "What am I doing here?" Yet, I knew this was the place I was to be for the next two years. After a lot of thought and prayer, I had made the crazy decision to extend my Taylor education by 24 months and come to graduate school. After being asked, "Didn't you graduate?" or "What are you doing here?" multiple times, I quickly realized that my fellow classmates and I didn't quite have an established role in this community. In the inaugural year of the Master of Arts in Higher Education and Student Development program, Taylor was welcoming new 17 graduate students highly involved within the campus.

Well, after a year here, I think we have found our place. Each of us have been challenged inside and out of the classroom. With the support of our professors, Skip Trudeau, Randall Dodge, and Tim Herrmann, as well as each other, we've made it through. In fact, I think we more than just made it through the first year, but we're better for it. We have had so many experiences that are shaping us to become people of change in the world of higher education. And think, in another year, there will be 17 transformed MAHE graduates entering higher education with the desire to serve the Kingdom of God and love those around them.

The highlight of this season was most definitely the win against William Penn at home. It was a huge crowd for parent's weekend and were coming off a win against Greenville. We haven't had a .500 record around here for a long time and it was a huge stepping stone for the program to show the students and the parents that we were turning things around. It was a close game and they fought their way back into and had a chance at the end, but we intercepted their last chance pass to win the game. This was the most exciting moment since I started playing at Taylor and I am glad that I have that moment to look back on with the other senior guys.

The Taylor volleyball season started early this year with the ten returning players traveling to South Africa for twelve days to do mission work. The experience was once in a lifetime and the players were able to minister through the sport of volleyball and come home to put all they learned into play during their season and throughout the rest of their lives.

Upon returning from South Africa, TUVB was joined by two transfer juniors and three freshmen. Our team became close within the first two weeks of early camp and we knew right away our season would be one to remember. Some of the highs of our season included beating Indiana Wesleyan in three games on our home court in front of an amazing group of fans and winning the co-conference championship.

Although our season ended earlier than we had hoped, we considered our season a success. Our theme this year was "Leaving a Legacy" and the verse that accompanied it was Philippians 2:1-18.

I have never been closer to a group of girls than I have been with my teammates throughout my four years playing volleyball. I have learned lessons that will last a lifetime and this program has shaped who I have become.

I think the season was extremely successful. I believe this because not only did we come out and have a very good year of success through our record, but we grew and used the events of the last few years as a springboard on and off the field. Starting with Northern Ireland and the ability to bond as a team while serving God was an incredible chance to begin something special. We used the lessons and our closeness that we developed on the trip to propel us to a great start. This gave us confidence and the drive to push forward.

I will always look back on my Senior year here at Taylor with a smile because we were able to be successful on the field and most importantly, I will always remember the incredible moments with those other 22 guys.

The season was challenging, especially without strong spiritual leadership. When we chose to think positively, work as a team, and glorify the Lord, we played well. Sadly, we were not consistent or unified, resulting in several losses. My best memory of the season was our very first game in Chicago where we beat Illinois Tech 2-1. I was blessed to have had the opportunity to represent my university and play a sport I love with 18 other Christian girls. We are to glorify God with the talent of soccer and I pray that the team will choose to do this in the years to come.

men's cross country

This season had many ups and downs. There was a lot of young talent on the team and at times it seemed that we couldn't get everyone to have a good race on the same day. I was very encouraged by how hard everyone worked in practice and how disciplined and dedicated to the team everyone was throughout the season. The team was encouraging to one another and to especially me as I did not quite have the season that I was hoping for. Overall, though, the season went well and it was great for the team to end the year by sending two sophomore runners to the National meet in Wisconsin.

Only one runner will be graduating and even though that will be a significant loss to the team both on and off the course, we have many young talented runners who I think will come back strong next year and take us to Nationals as a team.

As a whole, the women's cross country season was full of accomplishments. We lost quite a few seniors, plus a couple more, and only had one incoming freshman. With the few gals that we had, though, we were full of talent! Because of our size, we were not as capable to carry home victories as a team, but individual performances were phenomenal as the season went on. I think every gal improved her times by the end of the season and we were able to send several ladies to NCCAA Nationals individually.

Victory was also found in the attitudes and disciplines acquired throughout the season. Together we were constantly reminding one another Whom we were truly running for. We learned to encourage one another, even during the races. During some races, my greatest competition was one of my own teammates, but healthy competition, of course! We grew closer as athletes but also as sisters in Christ because we knew just where our strength truly had to come from.

The Taylor University Men's Tennis Team had one of the best years in the school's history. In the fall season, the team was nearly undefeated, only losing their last match to a nationally ranked opponent. They finished 12-1. The team won the regular season conference title going 7-0 in that span. They also won the Mid-Central Conference Tournament. Felipe Bedon, Jorge Burmicky, and the doubles team of Kyle Brown and Dave Smith all won their flights in the tournament.

In the spring season, the Trojans played a tough schedule in order to prepare themselves for the Region 8 Tournament. They played some great tennis over Spring Break in Orlando, FL leading up to the big finish. Taylor made it to the finals of the Region 8 Tournament and was one win away from Nationals, but lost a heartbreaker to Aquinas College 5-4. One more point would have given Taylor their second National appearance in history. The team finished the year with a record of 17-6 (7-0).

Overall, the season can be seen as extremely successful, not only because the team won a lot of matches, but because they grew in their relationships with each other and with God.

Playing on the Taylor University women's tennis team for the past four years has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life.

This past year was amazing for us - every day was filled with enthusiasm, laughter, and hard work. The wins on the court were always incredibly important to my teammates, but even more so was our relationship with Christ and each other. Because of this, we went out to the courts each day knowing that we were to give our absolute for the glory of God. We went to battle, exhibiting good sportsmanship so that others might see Christ through us.

I loved the competitive drive that the tennis team had, and I don't think "quit" was in our vocabulary. I know that when I graduate, Taylor Women's tennis is in good hands. I expect huge things to happen next year.

The golf season was full of ups and downs. We came into early camp very young and inexperienced, but played well in tryouts. Our season began on a rough note at the University of Indianapolis golf tournament, but quickly shifted at the Jon Spiece Memorial Golf Tournament in Defiance, OH. The team finished second out of the full field with a score of 294. The tournament score was the lowest in decades. Individually, Ryan Johnson shot an even par round of 72, followed by Trevor Fitch with 73, Arne Fahlen 74, and Josh Gates 75. This high point in the season was incredible, but the ultimate goal of the season, qualifying for the spring Regional Tournament, fell short in the MCC Tournament. Taylor finished 8 out of 9 teams and had no individual qualifiers. Ryan Johnson was low on the team with a rounds of 80, 75, 76, to put him two strokes out of earning All-MCC for the second year in a row. The Trojans hope to build on this past season's experiences and build up for a strong showing during the 2008-2009 season.

men's basketball

Following a disappointing year we hoped to reestablish the culture and winning tradition of Taylor basketball. We definitely made a step in the right direction. We won 20 games this season, beating seven nationally ranked teams. We recorded four wins over the top three teams in the conference, including three wins against teams that appeared in the elite eight of the NAIA National Tournament. Our team also finished with the second best defense in the country. Now that's Taylor basketball.

Unfortunately, a relatively new team resulted in some inconsistencies. We finished fifth in the conference with an 8-8 conference record. However, our accomplishments demonstrated the kind of team we were capable of being and proved we are heading in the right direction. After this season's experience, the Taylor community can anticipate a quality basketball program with quality people, pursuing excellence the right way.

The senior girls: "Our take on the season was to learn to overcome challenge and see God's faithfulness through it all. Some advice we give to underclassmen is to enjoy every moment that you have and appreciate the support and warm atmosphere at Taylor."

As I look back on this season, I would have to say that it was possibly one of the most successful we've had, not in terms of setting records or going to nationals, but in terms of meeting our goal of glorifying God through the game of basketball. We had a lot of obstacles to overcome this year, but I think God proved to be faithful to his promise that he would not give us more than we could endure, and I think we all emerged with a better understanding of how much strength it requires to overcome adversity, both physical and spiritual. Watching the team unify despite the issues we faced and come together to beat IWU in their gym and St. Francis in the first round of the MCC tournament were the highlights of the season for me, and I couldn't have asked for a better group of girls to spend my last year of Taylor basketball with.

This year, more than any other, the Taylor track team started as a group of individuals who through tears, laughter, and vomit transitioned into a single, strong, cohesive unit. TUTF2K08 excelled both in the liberal apportioning of grace and in the command to be a sharpening stone. If I were not a part of this group of individuals, this team, this family, I would be a lesser person. I am thankful.

After seven months of off-season practices, the team came together quite nicely with the returning players assuming their expected roles and incoming players filling the gaps where needed. Our pitching staff, which had suffered several key injuries during the off-season, was able to bounce back in the spring and was anchored equally by returning pitchers and incoming freshman. Defensively, the team was able to return position players who had all seen considerable playing time in previous years and performed quite well. Offensively, the team met high expectations by exhibiting both power and finesse at the plate. The team rounded out the season with a respectable 27-19 record, further establishing Taylor Baseball as one of the top teams in the Mid-Central Conference. The progress made this season will help TU Baseball continue to be successful for years to come.

While this season did not end how every senior athlete hopes it will end, the season was full of hope and ended with an exciting final game at the conference tournament. I fully believe our team should have won more games this year- we have all the elements to win- but I think these losses have taught us some valuable lessons and we have hopefully recognized that most of our losses were a result of losing to ourselves. I don't mean this negatively, I am simply trying to point out just how much faith I have in the ladies on our team.

The Taylor 2007-08 softball team has the most talent I have seen within my four years of being here. We have depth in our line-up, fun, quality athletes, and respect for one another. I hope this year's team carries these elements into their season next year, as well as the lessons learned this year. If they do, there will be no stopping them.

I cannot wait to come back and watch the 2008-09 Taylor softball team steal the conference tournament because they can, and will-they just have to believe it and reveal their determination to win while on the field, playing seven innings with no excuses and no regrets.

The 2007-2008 season marked the 10 year anniversary of the Taylor University Men's Lacrosse Club. We are truly thankful to those who have gone before us, paving the way and building a program that has allowed us to compete at the level we do. After graduating key players on both offense and defense, including a three-year starting goalie, we began the season with a fairly young and inexperienced team.

Throughout the season, our players became a team. Experienced players demonstrated leadership while younger players stepped up to fill vital roles and make significant contributions on the field. We battled injuries and illnesses throughout the season. Our numbers shrank from a team size of 22 players to a group of 13 by our last game. This proved to be a difficult factor to overcome and limited the success of our season by the numbers.

The season started early this year with our first game in February that unfortunately got snowed out. However, the team practiced in the KSAC every night, which brought about some crazy fun late night practices. You haven't lived until you've chased a tiny rubber ball around the KSAC. Once the weather was nicer, we moved our practices outside, which brought even more fun. We had a lot of new players this year who each brought great potential and different qualities to the team. Although we only won one game this year, every game was a blast- especially early morning and late night drives to and from games. I'm honored to have been able to play with these girls and to have been a part of this club. I'm eager to hear about their success in coming years. And I love running.

It was an early December morning and the horse barn was busy with riders preparing to compete in the Taylor-hosted Intercollegiate Horse Show at Black Dog Enterprises. The loud speaker's command billowed in the horse barn's arena so that all riders could hear, "Posting trot, please, posting trot." The command is quite familiar to the members of Taylor University's Equestrian Team, or "TUET," as we lovingly call the team.

TUET gained many new members this year from all different riding backgrounds and different equestrian experiences, but it was exciting to see how God used our team's separate abilities at the horse shows. Whether the task was hanging up water buckets in the hoop barn, getting through competing in an over fences class, or simply hanging out holding horses in the warm up arena, members of TUET came together at our home shows not only to compete in the classes or put on a successful show, but to enjoy the amazing opportunity God has blessed us with of riding horses.

Intramurals has been a way to meet many new people on campus. They're also used as a competitive outlet for students who used to be athletes, but chose not to continue in collegiate athletics. Most of all, though, it's a break from academics and students can just get together and do some fun physical activity with other students.

On March 13, the 2008 edition of Parnassus was released. Parnassus is Taylor's art and literary journal—an anthology of some of the best art and writing from the Taylor community, including students, faculty, staff, and alumni. The journal draws its name from the mountain in Greece where, according to mythology, the nine Muses lived.

A call for submissions was made in the fall. After the October 31 deadline, the student staff winnowed the submissions down to around 75 pieces, the best of which were forwarded to three judges for the three categories: art, prose, and poetry. The winners in each of these categories were awarded $100 each. The release party featured an art show of certain accepted pieces, as well as readings from many of those whose writings were published in the journal.

Professor Thom Satterlee was the faculty advisor for 2008. Kelsey Warren was editor, and staff members included Marika Kossian, Gabe Davis, Allison Reed, Andrew Neel, Brian Laing, and Jenny Shaffer.

WTUR 89.7fm is the student-run radio station. The staff includes Jacob Elsts (Manager), Eliza Dhonau (Assistant manager 1st Semester), Nick Rodemann (Assistant Manager 2nd Semester) Trevor Kight (Sports Director), Angie Poag (Music Director), Tyler Goss (1st Semester/Jterm Promotions Director), Jonathan Wolf (Productions Director), Jonathan Schelander (Assistant Productions Director), and faculty advisor Kathy Bruner.

WTUR plays mainly Christian Rock, while its current radio programs play varieties of music. It has grown exponentially this past semester, from four volunteers and three radio shows, to over 45 volunteers and 10 radio shows. This growth has not only caught the eye of Taylor's newspaper, the Echo, but has also received attention from the Marion-Chronicle Tribune.

I have always felt like I am in my element when I am singing. Whether I am belting show tunes in my car, or fine tuning a Mozart aria, when I sing, I feel confident that I am in the place where God desires me to be. Life in Taylor's vocal department is filled with chances every day to be in that place. Sometimes it's a Taylor Chorale rehearsal. This year in Chorale, we have sung in about 9 different languages, so each rehearsal has had something new to learn. Taylor Sounds rehearsal may find us singing a difficult Bach piece, and occasionally may find the men of the ensemble practicing for their Nostalgia Night debut. Opera rehearsal provides a chance to escape from the "everydayness" of the everyday because you are assigned a role, and then you learn the story behind the role and develop a character. You can create a world all of your own through an aria.

There are also the hours spent in the practice room. These hours are filled with many personal victories, but also the occasional defeats. Sometimes you try that really difficult cadenza 25 times before you get it, or move on to something else, deciding that, maybe today isn't your day for cadenzas. There are many more victories however. The times when you work very hard and then go to your lesson or a performance class and see, hear, and feel that victory are what keeps me coming back for more.

“ God is good; He always has been and He always will be. I know that He has worked this year in ways that we cannot see. The impact that we have is not obvious, but there are many friendships that we have developed and I know that the students look forward to the time that we have them. Now we just have to wait for the seeds planted to come to fruition. ”

Just before Spring Break, the Taylor University SIFE team traveled to Cleveland, Ohio to compete in our first Regional SIFE Competition. SIFE stands for Students Involved in Free Enterprise and is an international organization devoted to creating economic opportunity. SIFE began at Taylor University just this year and has already impacted hundreds of students. Throughout the year, Taylor business students worked on a number of different projects, including The Business As Mission Conference, a series of speakers on entrepreneurship and financial literacy, an elementary program aimed at teaching local youth about ethics, and teaming up with Our Town Upland, Inc. to bring economic development to the community. At the Regional Competition in Cleveland, Taylor SIFE students gave a 24 minute presentation to a panel of 20+ judges. The presentation introduced the judges to Taylor University, Upland, and the projects that our SIFE students are conducting to make our community and our world a better place. Taylor SIFE is proud to announce that we received the Rookie of the Year Award at the competition. As our first year comes to an end, we are excited to develop new projects and to expand our existing projects. As we move into year two, we hope to add students from other majors to our team. Taylor SIFE is a great opportunity to gain firsthand experience and unique skills while making a difference in the community and the world.

Being involved with Alpha Pi Iota has taught me a lot about the medical profession. I particularly enjoyed the various speakers API hosted over the course of the year. One speaker taught about how to be involved in the medical profession both here and abroad as well as how to incorporate mission work into daily practice. Another speaker taught about the different paths one can take within the medical field. I especially enjoyed when the speakers were former Taylor students. The group also provided a good environment in which to develop friendships with other pre-medicine majors.

"It started as a joke. 'Wouldn't it be funny if we went caroling?' Then it snowballed into myself, Bryan Miller, Britt Kroll, Dave Downy, Ryan Anderson, Marybeth Larson, Lindsay Wilt, and Caitlin Staples caroling through the library during finals week and crashing the admissions Christmas party. Marybeth Larson made us practice inside the Hayes House before we went out and made us a songbook. Afterwards we went back to the Hayes House and made Christmas cookies and fell asleep under the Christmas tree watching It's a Wonderful Life."

"When a J-Term break trip to the nation's largest indoor water park has the possibility of learning to surf, you have to take advantage of it. After a day and a half of trying and falling on my face after three seconds, I stayed up for a full 20 seconds and then proceeded to fall the hardest I had the entire time. The price of bruises and late nights were well worth the memories of a great two-night stay in a luxury suite with 10 awesome guys from 3E Wengatz."

Second Berg is the coolest.

Reasons why: Mike Nafziger, Hawaiian Luau's, Large Rooms, Hall Director Jake Drake, our very own ping pong table, ideally situated between the D.C. and the KSAC, up only one flight of stairs for the perfect daily workout, the only dorm with a forest and a lake behind it, athletic and intriguing men, all combined to form the coolest of cool floors on campus. The End.

First North English prides themselves on the Christmas open houses every year. As a freshman, I had no idea what to expect and I was surprised at all the hard work poured into the decorations. Transforming our wing into a Peter Pan fairytale in just one night proved to be a tough task, but the memories we made were well worth it. First North is about dwelling in each other's company with a snack during Soul Food, chilling with the Sammy statues on snowy nights, eating dinner down by the lake, or having a girls' night in the second suite on the comfy couch. The friendships made here will remain rooted in our small, loving family-like wing.

Lauren sits near the flood of peach juice when Emily is crying in the rain. Ashley has her weak moment for chocolate and Beth laughs at their moaning, but Abby sings sweet music as Megan chants with Sam and Dara. Karen would languidly swim above Faith in boiling water, but Julianne couldn't watch. Bethany felt like hugs and Kaitlyn hugged her, but the Marys were sad and Rachel needed sleep. Sarah screams as Kathryn uses her power and Bridget manipulates the show in Alix's dream. Caitlin said, "Please don't crush my tiny car!" and Lindsay and Meg were twinkling like sunlight. Margaux stands next to LaJoya on top of the winter sky. Sweet Jennica whispers to Alicia from behind Keri's garden. Tell Ariel how Angela did cook our purple flower in the milk beneath Britton.

Top 10 reasons why you wish you lived on Second Center English:

10. Our off-campus seniors invite us over to watch "The Office" on their big screen.
9. Our wing retreats always include screaming ninjas.
8. We not only have an amazing brother floor of Foundation, but we also have 2EW as our adopted brother floor.
7. We celebrate Ground Hog's Day.
6. We have our own hair dresser, manicurist, and masseuse.
5. Our leaders strive to be the best they can be... for this family. PA appreciation day is one of the many ways we show our gratitude, yeah party poof.
4. We helped raise $1,159 for OneVerse, and were rewarded with front row seats at Airband.
3. The Macomers are our wonderful wing hook-up. Everybody loves Charlie and R.J.
2. Wing dinners at 5:00. Sure there's food, but we're the ones playing hide-and-seek, fruit relays, and other loud games that everybody loves.
1. Fact: We love each other more than Dwight loves Battlestar Galactica.

second south english

If we do say so ourselves, the Dirrrty South had a pretty fantastic year. After all, life (and tea) is sweeter in the South. Aside from the typical things like inhaling chips and salsa, finger-painting our feelings, and fitting thirteen people around a DC table on a semi-regular basis, we had some atypical events as well. Singing karaoke, spending Valentine's Day at McDonald's, and dancing to Elvis for Airband were just a few fun highlights throughout the year. The twenty-four of us truly became a family in the nine months here, and this year will certainly be recorded in the archives of our memories.

Originally, when I found out that I was going to be in English after requesting Olson as my first choice for a dorm, I was disappointed, but upon meeting the girls of Third South, everything changed. These girls have become some of my closest friends. They are completely crazy, whether it's running to Handy Andy's several times a day, stealing things from First Berg, playing Rockband until we're dizzy, failing at pick-a-dates more times than we can count, or just enjoying each other's company, I have made more memories with my wing than I would have ever expected. They are all crazy awesome and sincerely care about one another. Just getting to know them all has been probably my favorite experience during my freshman year at Taylor.

A week had passed since Fo'So had held its open house. Nearly everyone who was there thought it was a great time: Sumo Santa was wrestling his contenders, Brandon Jacob was telling Christmas tales, and one could get hot chocolate in a winter decorated suite. While all the memories of this day are pleasant as sunshine, there is one mark that makes this day a dark day. Some say that there is no reason to cry over spilled milk. I agree, but I think there is almost a reason to cry over spilled curdled milk. Milk that had been left over from the Very-Fo'So'-Christmas-Open-House (and had spent a week in the fridge) was spilled on the floor. While its surface area wasn't much greater than a text book, the smell consumed every aspect of Fo'So. It wasn't until J-term that many Fo'So gents felt it was safe to finally take a large inhale. While many fingers have been pointed, to this day it is still a mystery that will haunt the dreams of all who experienced it.

Our closets are made for sharing,
Communal bathrooms, our favorite hangout
Can I borrow your curling iron?
Mary-Lou- "Here's your shout-out"

Olson Hall...al...al...al!
So much more than dorm!
Olson Hall..al...al...al!
When I'm at Taylor its home!

When I walk in the building
My heart skips a beat
This dorm is made for Lovin'
Only four years, its bittersweet.

There's something about these ladies
These words cannot explain
We laugh, we cry, we share our dreams
Our hearts become one chain!

Every wings a little bit different
East, West, Center, The Lounge!
It s full of friendly people
With nice teeth, just look around!

The buildings names after Grace Olson
Her Portrait hangs on the wall.
If you need a pick-a-date 300 Beauties, just give us a call.

Olson Hall...al...al...al!
So much more than dorm!
Olson Hall...al...al...al!
When I'm at Taylor its home!

We have a new hall director
Her name's Deana, but she goes by Dee
If you get a flood after 1 A.M?
Call your PA, she had a floatie!

Olson Hall...al...al...al!
So much more than dorm!
Olson Hall..al...al...al!
When I'm at Taylor its home!

My last two years on 2EO have been the most memorable and the most treasured years at Taylor. There was always laughter and mischief in which we all delighted in as a floor. However, there were also a lot of God-molding experiences on the floor. Through these highs and lows I have been able to see the meaning of sisterly love through the girls of 2EO. These circumstances allowed us to become closer as a wing. We were able to be real with one another and help each other with the individual struggles we were going through. It was through these times that I was able to see the strength of prayer that was possible from a floor of women that truly cared about one another. Through it all I was able to see the real meaning of what it was to be true Sisters in Christ.

-Allie Gil '09

On the evening of Friday, January 4, Third West Olson was peacefully basking in the afterglow of the first open house of the new year. Little did they know that this gentle night would soon become Olson Hall history. Grace Olson fatefully encountered her first flood. This flood, similar to the one recorded in Genesis, was a beautiful disaster—it may or may not have made national headlines. The deluge began around 12:50 a.m. Despite the conspiracy theory that a suspicious third west resident was tinkering with the sprinkler system above her bed, the brutal truth is that a frozen water line burst in the attic, spewing thick dirty water at 1.2 million gallons per minute. Not once petering out, valiant faculty and students persevered until daybreak, sweating bullets as they catapulted waterlogged belongings out the windows and onto Olson Beach. The following Monday, the homeless flood victims packed up their “go-big-or-go-home” attitudes and the few belongs they could salvage and moved into their new resting place- the Best Western Resort and Spa in Gas City. Furthermore, with welcoming arms, the hospitable Habeckers ensured that the vagabonds were as comfortable as possible. Days turned to weeks as the deafening fans in the rooms droned on. A “mold specialist” was on scene to continually assess the situation several times. New maroon and gold casino-style carpet was installed into nearly every room and each room was enhanced with several holes drilled into the walls. “Our lives will never be the same,” said interim PA, Emily Bergstrom. Through it all, the flood victims remained bright eyed and bushy tailed as they endured the lasting physical and emotional effects of the flood.

The floor retreat was rapturous-what could possibly be better than home-cooked food, capture the flag, and a day filled with old American Gladiators runs? Oh, the epic bonfire with people running through the flames is also noteworthy.

-Caleb Barrows '10

The Brotherhood is like a little dog. Sometimes it's nice and snuggly, and sometimes it pees on you, but you love it anyway.

-Aaron Burket '10

Penthouse has made a world of difference in my life. Although Christmas Open-house, Toga Football, and Cynco de Mayo are what others see, there is more to this community of 80 men. As I look back at my time on the floor, what sticks out most to me are the relationships that I've made. These are guys that have been willing to get into my life and have stretched me to grow from a childish boy into a more mature man. This year, the senior leadership on Penthouse has pushed me beyond my own thought, and has modeled lives of devoted, godly men. To steal a catch line from one of the small groups on the floor, and not to mention the Bible, "we are each pieces of iron sharpening each other." I will never forget my years on Penthouse; the family of brothers that will last forever.

Phurst West is easily the worst wing in Wengatz. We're not the fastest guys. We don't all have girlfriends. None of us can bench 140. Only D-Moore and Arne can cook. No one from the wing got married last year. We worship our two members with at least 3.0 GPA's. None of us have a healthy Body Mass Index. Ninety percent of us snore. We're too self-conscious to shower anywhere but in the corner spot. Three of us have cars. On rare occasions someone is witty enough to create a joke. None of us have ever been approached by girls. Frankly, Phurst West Wengatz doesn't do anything sweet...except lie a lot.

We had an undefeated intramural football season for the first time anyone could remember. We ended up being runner up in the playoffs. It was a memorable time with a great chance to bond. It was a great time at the beginning of the year.

Second west is a mighty union of active and entertaining young men. This wing boasts an ideal study and worship environment, all the while balancing appropriate levels of activity and the occasional prank. 2W history is speckled with rubies and its future is encrusted with emeralds. The acute sense of community can be clearly traced back to the blue ribbon leadership of its renowned upperclassmen. Along with time-proven traditions, 2W offers a sense of history. However, the wing credo encourages its members to actively engage the future with resolve fortified in scripture. Each year, hundreds of perspectives battle to achieve a coveted position, and only those who prove to be spiritually and academically superior are awarded a spot in the ranks. On the outside, 2W may appear as a tight knit unit of community-oriented men, but closer inspection reveals a literal jungle gym of trust, dedicated service, and devotion. The stupendous legacy rivals that of the roughriders, Buffalo soldiers, and Denver nuggets. Remember, if you can't find a member on the wing, check Rediger Chapel.

second center wengatz

Second Center is a very diverse but tight knit group of guys. 2C is known for its slushie/pancake open houses and for David Roher's (coupon) body. So if you enjoy slushies and pancakes, a good game of Halo, or admiring beautiful abs, 2C is the place for you.

second east wengatz

Second East is the place to be because it is always off the heazy. Whether it is Taylor Barkley tearing it up on 007 James Bond, the tennis junkies doing some off-season training with Mario Tennis, or everyone taking a couple of hours to play some sandlot baseball, Second East is the place for lovers.

-Adam Golder '09

We all live in a jello-filled wing. If we had a pool, we'd all go swimming. Second East is good at music and sports - we stick together in our cohorts.

third west wengatz

What can you say about the great wing WWIII in such a short space? We love sports, 2WO, food, Jerry's farm and of course, squirrel wrangling. We have a rich history filled with fun and tradition. Melon and gourd is something all of campus loves, which brings us to the best pick-a-date on campus: O-Fest. Ladies, this pick-a-date is amazing - just ask around. The men of WWIII strive to be men of integrity, honor, and most importantly, men of God. In my time as a WWIII member, I've grown so much with the help of my brothers in Christ. I've met some really great friends who aren't afraid to call me out and build me up. If I could summarize my wing with one quote, I would have to use the words of my roommate, "I'm from 3rd West. Date me."

third center wengatz

Voted best overall male wing on campus, Third Center Wengatz is difficult to describe in only a short paragraph. 3C is one, big, happy family fathered by Kevin Nielsen and the outstanding leadership of Trevor Terrell and Jeff Goodman. Unfortunately, it suffered a loss when Lamont Laing left for an internship. Although Chey "Friar Tuck" West often causes the wing to rumble in laughter, it is always grounded by Steve Stallings and Bryce Perkins, who built the foundation. Many 3C folk cannot identify with Taylor's culture due to their hard upbringing on the streets of Philadelphia. Doug Walker, Isaac Bryan (non-resident), Nate Kirsch, Andy Buckwalter, and Nathan Butcher all agree that there is no better place to live than the great "City of Brotherly Love." Philosophy majors Joe Daugherty and Brett Wilson frequently add intellectual insight. Jordan Rice and Dan Swartz always make sure there's something to do on the weekends. Cousins Dan Saldi and Adam Hoover add a Bolivian spice to the 3C stew, which is oh-so-carefully elixired by the supple hands of Neil Long and Kyle DuPont (very prone to addictions). Known for his healthy sleeping patterns, Andy Marston is a great example for young students such as Bryan "Electric" Allingham. Other classic characters include "Old Man Paul" Passiales and Kyle "Father Time" Cassidy. The leader of NBD, Brent "Soulja Boy" Clouse, brings the wing entertaining V-logs, JP Robles is an asset to the wing, and Kevin Mattice and Josh Read later joined the fun after studying in Ireland first semester. The 2008-2009 school year looks promising for 3C as Kyle Barry (KGB) plans to live in Fairlane. Jay Sorensen put it best when he said, "3C is like my embarrassing boyfriend." David Fox and Jake Fulton also contributed by saying, "3C is like flying an airplane. When you reach cruising altitude, you can remove your seatbelt." Finally, our most beloved member is quoted as saying, "I live and die by this wing."

third east wengatz

3EW was all at Buffalo Wild Wings for a couple birthdays when one of my wingmates came up and told me about a game the football players play. He explained that he was going to set me up with a table of random strangers and I had to spit my best game. He told me not to be worried because the table had already been told that we were doing this. I had one minute and then I was sent off.

I got to the co-ed table and introduced myself as Jorge. One of the boys looked at me and said, "Wait up. You're supposed to hit on me first." I stared at him strangely. While I was trying to recover from the strange comment, a girl at the table asked if I always tucked my shirt in. Strike one. As I untucked my shirt, I said that my old school would give detentions for untucked shirts, which was true. The same girl responded, "That's (expletive)!" Strike two. I then stated that I was a Chemistry Education major. Strike three. At this point, I'm looking back at my wingmates because I was not doing so well. They caught on and told Michael Strand, my roommate, that I needed his help. He reminded them that he had a girlfriend, but they reminded him that I was his roommate - and he agreed. He snuck up behind one of the other girls at the table, held out his hand, and said, "Will you hold this for me while I take a walk". She said she didn't understand. Another girl at the table than told her that he was asking her to take a walk with him and then she responded, "Oh, that's cute."

As some of my wingmates and I got to the car, I hear, "Jorge, Jorge, Jorge!" behind me in the distance. I looked back to see the girl Michael had talked to waving her hands wildly and coming towards us. She leaned in like she was going to kiss me and I leaned in too. And then she said, "Hey...is your friend single?" Thinking she was talking about me, I said, "Yes...no...no... he...is not...he has a girlfriend named Sarah."

Just as I thought my romance career was over, though, she Facebook-friended me the next day. I even invited her on a pick-a-date, which she could not make because of her brother's wedding - what are the odds? I was later informed that that group sitting at the table was actually celebrating one of the group member's release from house arrest.

We laugh and cry our way through all the late nights, early mornings, group projects, intramural games, and so much more. And we walk away as different people.

Once we experience those blessed times of connection, discovery, playing, action, and growth, a transformation is undeniable.

It's suddenly time for change.

Of course it's not always easy. Actually, sometimes it's really painful.

Thank goodness for the hope that exists in knowing that healing is not only possible, but entirely purposeful as well.

Again, we can't do it alone. It takes a great deal of love, honesty, and patience from others to move forward.

And time. It always takes time.

We need time to think, to pray, to plan, and to build. And we must remember that the end result is almost always beautiful.

Of course this book cannot fully portray all of what happens here to provoke such change - that would be impossible. Then again, we are the living and breathing proof.

Our time at Taylor is a chance to transition into the next time in our lives. Maybe these few years at Taylor will be the best in your life. Maybe they'll be the worst. Either way, Taylor is not your only time.

We have a lot to learn. And we will only gain as much as we're willing to receive. Embrace this time of change.

After all, we have come to Taylor University for such a time as this.
